The city council meeting is rapidly approaching and the mayor expects there is going to be a LARGE turn out. He knows there will not be enough time to introduce everyone from both sides. The mayor wants to make sure all parties are equally represented and all families participating are acknowledged. He asks that all participants create a family coat of arms that will be hung at the meeting.

The coat of arms needs to represent YOUR family. You must break your shield into at least three pieces. One of the sections must represent where you fall in your family line of children. The other two or more sections should represent items important to your family structure. These items need to be special and depict why your family is unique. On the back of your shield, be sure to include a small explanation of each picture and how it relates to your family structure. You want to make sure your shield is neat, and people will be able to tell that it is your family when it is displayed at the city council meeting.

Criteria used to assess this task:
- Break shield into at least three pieces.
- Explain correlation between pictures and family structure.
- Illustrate information neatly.

See attached rubric for a detailed breakdown of points!