Throughout your entire study of structure, you will be asked to accomplish several tasks. Your teachers are asking you to keep a reflection journal on your study of structure and on your process of completion for the tasks assigned. You will keep this journal with you as you travel from class to class. Sometimes the teachers will give you specific questions that they would like you to reflect on, and at other times they might ask you to reflect on where you are in your task. In either case, you must have your journal with you at all times in every single academic class. This assignment will be counted as a grade for each academic class, and as such, it is to your advantage to keep a complete record of what is expected of you. It is our hope that you will recognize and be able to discuss the value of structure, be able to express why structures change, and identify the various forms and roles that structures play across the content areas. How is structure in math similar to structure in language arts? How is structure in language arts similar to structure in social science? You will be able to answer these questions and many more because you will be the expert on structure.

Criteria used to assess this task:

- Follow appropriate format for each journal entry.
  - Date each journal entry.
  - Include content area for each entry.
  - Include prompt for each entry.
  - Write at least 5 sentences for each entry.
- Keep all journals together.
- Complete all journals.
- Use correct spelling and grammar.
- Reveal feelings and thoughts in each journal entry.
- Convey ideas about structure in each journal entry.

See attached rubric for a detailed breakdown of points.